Keynote Description:

Remote Leadership:

Where inclusion, social impact, and sustainability intersect

What if...

...remote leadership was your way forward?

The coronavirus crisis has forced many businesses to pivot how they bring products to market, their offerings, and how they lead their teams. Through organizational upheaval, many have realized there are limitations and opportunities for leading remotely. Once the lockdown lifts, many organizations will be enticed to go back to business as usual. Not so fast.

Internationally, many small to mid-size (SMEs) businesses have been operating remotely for years, not only to survive but to thrive. If you are starting a business, expanding, or seeking exponential growth, there are a multitude of advantages to a new business model.

Through inspiring stories, Suzanne F. Stevens shares strategies to achieve highly engaged teams, loyal customers, and symbiotic collaborators while creating an inclusive culture that is sustainable and has a social impact.

What will the audience experience during this keynote?

Suzanne is a “provocative, energizing, inspiring speaker” that lays the foundation for what leaders need to consider when contributing to society sustainably. Suzanne will take the audience on a journey where they will receive strategies from remote corners of the world, to import business approaches and conscious leadership techniques that will attract colleagues, collaborators, and customers.

This keynote creates the most significant value to...

Entrepreneurs and leaders of small and mid-size businesses who want to grow while having a conscious social impact.

Remote and in-person delivery.
